

A character for orderings in algebraic terms is introduced. Based on this it is shown that so called ordermorphisms coincide with preference rules imposed with conditions such as independence of irrelevant alternatives. We end with a new impossibility result based on this character which does not involve any transitivity or acyclicity requirement.